What is the current tariff environment in Sweden?

The current tariff environment in Sweden is characterized by relatively low average tariff rates, consistent with EU standards, but faces unprecedented challenges from US trade policy shifts under the Trump administration.

What is Sweden's tariff landscape in 2025?

Sweden's tariff landscape in 2025 represents a complex intersection of European Union trade policies and bilateral relationships with major trading partners, particularly the United States. As a key member of the EU, Sweden operates within the framework of the EU's Common Commercial Policy, which sets the foundation for its tariff structure.

How will US tariffs affect Sweden's exports to the US?

The data reveals that Sweden faces substantial challenges from US tariffs reaching 25% on steel and aluminum, significantly impacting key industries. The projected 16% decline in Swedish exports to the US demonstrates the severe economic consequences of these trade barriers.

Do Swedish companies have to pay import tariffs?

If the import tariffs come into force, it is in many cases the Swedish companies that have to pay import tariffs, in that they import goods to their US production facilities or sales companies. Companies expect that they will have to charge higher selling prices to US customers to compensate for the import tariffs.

Sweden's export tariff framework in 2025 reflects its position as a major exporting nation within the European Union structure, where export restrictions are generally minimal to promote free trade.
